

The Fab5Flower Jar Cover

To make The Fab5Flower Jar Cover you will also need the following:

- More of the same yarn as you used for your flower, I used yarn B
- Jar with an opening a bit smaller than you flower
- Finished Fab5Flower

I love to have lavender in my studio, not only does it smell lovely but it's good to keep evil little bugs that eat fabric away. I have saved small glass jars that have had different things like baby food or yoghurt in them. These are perfect for storing for instance lavender or buttons. With little kids running about and pulling at everything I recently had a lavender mishap with lavender all over my carpeted studio, this is when I had this idea.

The pattern:

With yarn B: ch70 and cut yarn. Do measure your jar though, I chained 70 as that was enough to go around the jar top and tie a little bow – this depends not only on the size of the jar but also what type of yarn you are using.

Now thread the chain made through the spaces created under the picot3 and in between the 2 hdc underneath the picot3.

Place your cover on top of your jar and tie it tight and shut
